Introduction

Nathan represents businesses and individuals in a wide variety of complex civil and criminal matters at both the trial and appellate court levels in federal and state court. He has experience defending individuals charged with a variety of federal crimes, including mail and wire fraud, bank fraud, money laundering, RICO violations, environmental crimes, federal securities fraud, and tax evasion. In civil cases, Nathan represents individuals and corporations in high stakes litigation involving tort and contract claims, health care law, employment disputes, False Claims Act cases, and arbitration. Nathan has also conducted a number of complex investigations, including both court-appointed and internal corporate investigations.

Nathan graduated magna cum laude from Tulane Law School (Order of the Coif). After law school, Nathan clerked for two federal judges: United States District Judge Eldon E. Fallon, in the Eastern District of Louisiana; and United States Circuit Judge Jacques L. Wiener, of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Prior to law school, Nathan served for two years with his wife as United States Peace Corps Volunteers teaching secondary school in Mchinji, Malawi.

Nathan's pro bono work has included representing a military veteran in administrative proceedings to request service-related medical benefits; a Somali immigrant family in kinship proceedings to care for their orphaned nephew; and an undocumented immigrant survivor of domestic violence in a successful U-visa petition.
